

What is Living with Technology on Line?

by Gerald L Fitton

It is an on line version of the former monthly magazine "Living with Technology" - but that doesn't get us much further! Living with Technology, the printed version, ceased publication in the Summer of 2006 and it has been replaced by this 'On Line' version.

On this website you will find articles freely given by enthusiasts (even some experts!) relating to all sorts of technology from satellite navigation systems and mobile phones to ironing boards, can openers and laminating machines.

If you are enthusiastic about something even vaguely technical then send us an article for publication on this website. You don't have to be an expert; you don't even have to be right about everything; you do have to be willing to 'fine tune' your article if you discover that you can improve it!

It's not only information about useful technology which you'll find on this site. You'll find articles or snippets relating to totally useless gadgets and things which might be regarded more as fun than essential bits of technological kit. Indeed, in my opinion, fun things give much more pleasure than the 'hard stuff'! So I say, "Let's hear more about all those useless gadgets that make our ability to Live with Technology more enjoyable!"

In addition to this website we have a light hearted and sometimes useful chat group. You don't have to be an expert on anything. Indeed, if you have a question to ask about bread making machines, hearing aids, Christmas puddings and fairy lights or even whether the latest children's game is value for money or why your lawn mower isn't working then all you have to do is ask. Perhaps you won't get an answer - but perhaps you will.

We have an email chat group.

If you wish to join the email chat group of Living with Technology then:

Send an email to: mailto: majordomo@www.livtech.co.uk

In the body of the message include the words: subscribe chat

You can unsubscribe just as easily at any time by including "unsubscribe chat" in the body of an email. Your email address will not be used by us in any way other than to send you the outpouring of members of the chat list - your email address is safe with us.

We are a very friendly and helpful group. Give us a try and see if you like what you read.

Gerald L Fitton    Webmaster